AN OVERVIEW

This report reflects some pertinent facts in summary relating to the implementation of those programs delegated to the State Department of Social Services by the General Assembly. Each year programs seem to become more complex, the demands on them more numerous, and Federal regulations more exacting.

The 1970-72 biennium more than any recent period, has been a time in the State Department of Social Services of constant examination of programs and services in an effort to improve on services and their delivery and to make them more responsive to those who need them. Two significant studies made with the ultimate purpose of improved services were completed the first year of the biennium. The first was the Greenleigh Associates' study of the Department's field staff operation consisting of some 143 staff members at the time of the study. This resulted in the recommendation by the staff for establishment of six district offices, geographically located and staffed according to the workload in each district. The request for funding this recommendation was rejected by the 1971 General Assembly. The recommendation remains a high priority item with the State Board of Social Services.

The second study done by the consulting firm of Booz-Allen Public Administration Services, evaluated the administration and financing of the State's social services system, its adequacy to provide needed services, and alternative methods of financing and administering the programs. It resulted in the recommendation that North Carolina move toward a State-administered social services system, administered through districts, with the State paying the entire non-Federal share of costs. The State Board is unanimous in its support of this recommendation and it, too, is a high priority item.

Another significant study approved by the State Board of Social Services during this period and near completion is a comprehensive study of juvenile detention in the State. This project was funded by a special grant and is being conducted by the National Juvenile Detention Association. The study includes not only juvenile detention but related areas such as the court system and juvenile probation.

Internally, several program innovations and new management tools are making for improved and extended services. The State Adoption Resource Exchange is successfully assisting in finding homes for North Carolina children in need of placement and in locating suitable children for approved adoptive applicants. Another adoption project is using State staff to help county social services departments develop additional adoptive home resources for children with special needs.

The PACE program (Plan Assuring College Education) heretofore available for students only in the summer months is being extended on a limited basis for part-time work for eligible students during the academic year, known as PAY (PACE Academic Year).

Several million dollars in Federal funds have been brought into the State this biennium for special projects to help people who are poor because they have never had a chance or because they are disabled or old. They include day care centers for disadvantaged pre-school children; extended day care for children needing care beyond school hours; a summer day care project; social services to pregnant girls; training center for infant-toddler care; human resource development; services to the emotionally disturbed; comprehensive services to low income elderly; and adult developmental activities.

The Family Planning Patient Information System, implemented in early 1972, is a cooperative endeavor of State and private agencies. Designed eventually to cover the entire State, it is a computerized reporting system developed to provide groups concerned with family planning with information necessary for program management and evaluation.

The Department has installed a teleprocessing procedure to give access via video display units to the agency's data processing case records on a program, county account number basis. Plans are in the immediate future to extend teleprocessing capabilities to those counties whose caseloads can economically justify it.

"Statistical Journal" and "Program Facts, Public Assistance and Related Program" have been initiated on a quarterly basis this biennium.

With the passage by the 1971 General Assembly of the State Government Reorganization Act, the State Board of Social Services and State Department of Social Services, along with some 29 other agencies, were transferred effective December 10, 1971, to the Department of Human Resources. The law provides that the transferred agencies are to exercise all their "prescribed statutory powers independently of the head of the principal department, except . . . the management functions . . . shall be performed under the direction and supervision of the head of the principal department." It then defines "management functions" as meaning "planning, organizing, staffing, directing, coordinating, reporting, and budgeting." The seven member State Board of Social Services, appointed by the Governor, therefore, continues to have responsibility for making policy for the State's social services programs.

By provision of this same Act, the Division of Human Relations of the Department of Local Affairs was transferred as of October 1, 1971, to the State Department of Social Services and became the Division of Economic Opportunity, making a total of eight divisions in the Department.

The General Assembly appropriated a 1971-73 social services budget in the total amount of $590,544,618. Of this, $408,954,582 was Federal funds; $112,065,795, State; $69,418,816, county; and $105,425, other. Included in the budget was an amount for the State to pay 85 percent and the counties 15 percent of the non-Federal share of Medicaid costs. While a sufficient appropriation to pay 100 percent of the standard budget in the aid to families with dependent children category had top priority in the Department's budget request, the General Assembly turned it down. Once again it has first priority in the 1973-75 budget request. In the meantime, 86 percent of need in the AFDC category continues to be paid, while 100 percent is paid in the aid to the aged and disabled category.

Other major social services and related legislation enacted by the 1971 General Assembly includes: a mandatory child abuse and neglect reporting law; the Interstate Compact on Placement of Children which provided for North Carolina to join the compact on the placement of children for foster care or adoption with a uniform reciprocal agreement under common regulations for all participating states; a mandatory day care licensing law with licensing done by an independent board in accordance with minimum standards for basic license spelled out in the law; and an advocacy commission on children and youth which will operate no services but will advocate the interests of children and youth within State and local government and private agencies and make appropriate recommendations to the Governor and the General Assembly.

When the average citizen thinks of social services, or welfare, he thinks in terms of money payments to individuals. That, however, is just one segment of a very complex program that involves many services that are adapted to the individual needs of the recipients. Because of this it is impossible to give an exhaustive accounting of all services to all people. The table below is illustrative of people served by some of the programs of this department. In some instances the total number can be given; in others, because some recipients are served more than once, it is impossible to get an unduplicated count and an average for the month or the year is given.

The second table relates altogether to social services and is only for fiscal 1972 since such reporting is available only for that period.
